INTRODUCTION

Hundred-years old cultures give birth to Communities, being transmitted through rhymes of those who are narrating it and interpretating the past through wisdom. One's accomplishments result from rituals and metamorphosis, bonding the human being to its own roots through dance, history, music, colours, flavours, materials and landscapes.

Space and Matter relate themselves with the power of rituals, drawing together the lines of an architecture encharged of passing and preserving History.

DESIGN

THEME

The intervention area represents a breeding ground of centuries-old cultures, rich in rituals and experiences coming from father to son, and telling stories about Africa. Cultures here are mixing together in harmony, within an environment full of experiences. Some of those ethnic groups are deeply rooted in history, and, since they never had any archives or written works, they passed those stories only thanks to words coming from the Elders.

Globalization effects are reflecting today on communities, putting ancient rituals and the preservation of cultural identities down the risk.

The town of Sedhiou, one amongst the less well fixed, has no places to let its own community spread its culture and habits, where to have the chance for everyone to relate and express themselves through arts those art the region is rich in.

Here it comes the need to design a meeting place, promoting culture and witness of a location put in discussion during regional conflicts occurred between 1980 and 2005.

DESIGN

PROGRAM

The planning of a Cultural Center for the city of Sedhiou aims to renovate the identity of the area, trying to reach the goal of creating a location where local cultures may have the chance to be told, passed on and preserved. This challenge sees the planning of an architectural structure as witness of the peaceful relation occurring among local ethnic groups and promoting, at the same time, preservation of local habits. The competitor will show his theme through a surprising and integrated design at once, developing a structure destined to be an Icon for the entire country, without weighing on the surrounding environment. The Architectural structure will require:

- Maximum surfaces: 550 m² for the indoor area, 400 m² for the open space area. Maximum height of 8 mt;
- Three main designed areas for Education, Exhibitions and Performances. Furthermore, Bureau and Restrooms must be included;
- A call to economic intervention and sustainability;
- The need of dealing with subjects such as timing or relative problems linked to the structure development, to be set within an area where no specialized workforce exists. For the same reason, projects displaying care about developing time, self-construction and implementation aspects, will be encouraged;
- The preference of local and natural materials, being provided from surrounding areas and occasionally re-usage of waste products;
- Optimization and preservation of water supplying ;
- Flexible open spaces;

Available on site materials or findable nearby, consist in: Bamboo, Clay Bricks (usual size: 20x30x15cm), Cement Bricks (20x30x15cm), metal plates, straw, laterite stones, shells, sand, wooden beams and boards, Clay, Palm tree leaves. Unmentioned materials may be imported from abroad or surrounding main cities, including increasing developing costs.

All necessary documentation about project development is available to free download on a dedicated section of the website. Materials and images are protected by Copyright and must be exclusively used within the context of this competition.

LOCATION

From 1980 to 2005, the region of Casamance, located in the extreme south of Senegal, passed through marks of a war whose tolls rise to more than 20.000 evacuees and 5.000 deaths. The Casamance river gives the same name to the entire region, cutting the administrative regions of Ziguinchor, Kolda and Sedhiou. The designed area is located in the administrative center of Sedhiou. The city has among 22.000 habitants, against the 420.000 of the whole region, spreaded in different villages.

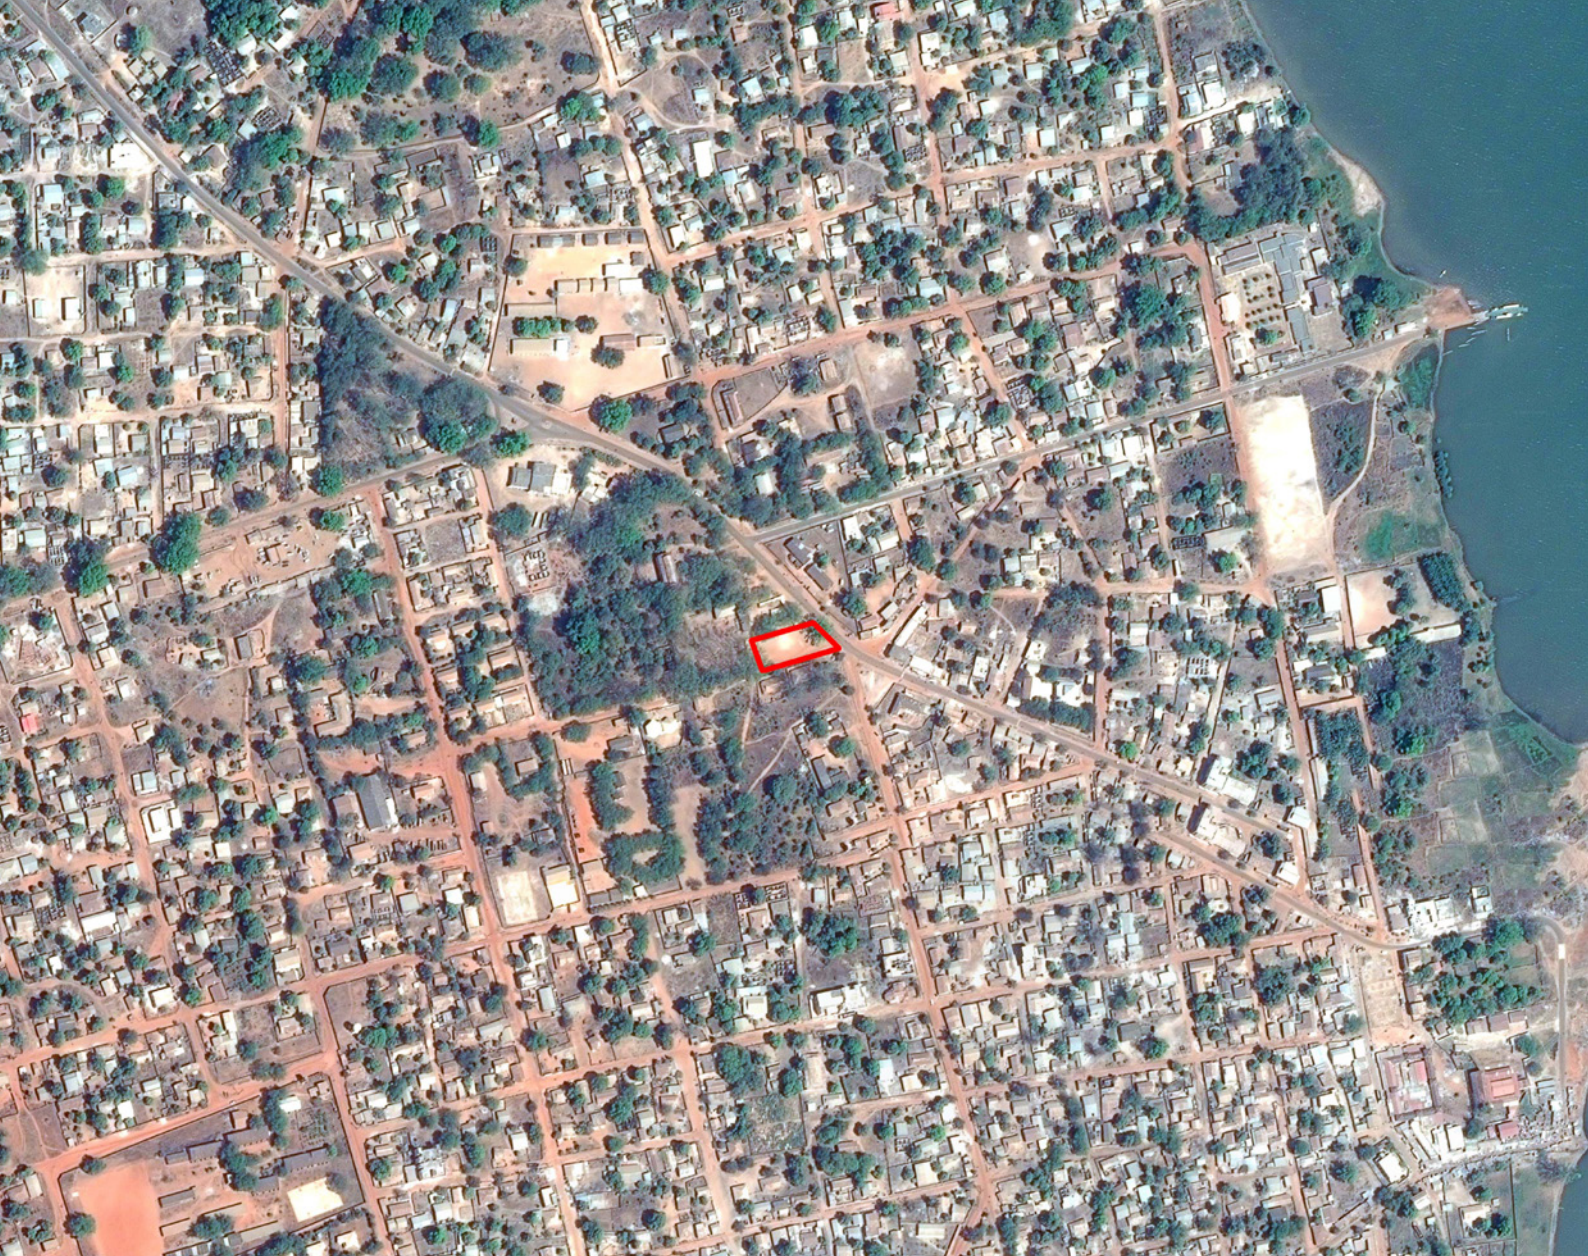

The biggest ethnic groups consist in: Mandinka, Balantes, Diolas, Fula, Creol, Diahanké, Mancangne. The most common spoken language is the Mandinga, ethnic relevance featured by the presence of Griot Individuals, as promoters of african culture and most important story-tellers, passing the narration of historical events through the aid of the musical instrument called Kora.

As for the rest of the country, Sedhiou experiences the passing of two main seasons: the dry season, occurring from November to May, and the rainy one, from June up to October, with an average of 1000-1150 mm per year. The dry period has temperatures around 33° and 45°. Agricultural and fishing activities has considerably reduced due to the recent drought and affecting nutritional stability in family groups.

Different arboreal species grow in Sedhiou. Many trees are used in order to product building materials; Kahya Senegalensis, Kapok tree, Dimb tree, Palm and Fromager trees are some examples.

The most developed economical branch in Sedhiou still remains agriculture. Main products consist in: Millet, Corn, Rice, Sweet potato, Manioc potato, Peanuts and Cashew nuts, Mangoes, Oranges, Papayas, Lettuce, Carrots and Tomatoes. Despite such a variety of products, the growing beyond actual limits for producers is limited by the lack of infrastructures.

Health system is insufficient too. The entire region of Sedhiou counts just one hospital with few operating rooms and a low number of employees, even if some First aid and health centers are dislocated all over the rest of the region. Life expectancy (65 years) and infant mortality rate (82%) are strongly affected by the lacking organization of Health System. Its weak cleanliness represents one amongst the main causes of illness. Most of the population, for instance, drinks from non-purified and hand-made water reservoirs, consequently experiencing health problems such as dysentery and related diseases. Malaria represents the most increasing case in the region, together with the high tuberculosis and HIV virus rates. Literacy reaches weakly 50%, being affected by the lack of transports and accessibility to school structures in general. The underground natural materials is characterized by a reddish Laterite stone, rich in iron and alternated layers of sand and clay.

Music, dance and Tailoring are main regional arts, found together with some other minor activities linked to handicraft.

ORGANIZATION PURPOSE

The purpose of the contest consists in creating an iconic architectural structure in order to preserve local cultures coming from the region of Sedhiou, voted to respect towards environment and local cultural balance existing in the area, improving uncertainty conditions of communities and aimed to preserve customs.

The winning project must be intended as a donation to the International Non Profit Organization (INPO) Balouo Salo, in order to be shared with communities and institutions of Sedhiou, who will have the chance to realize it cooperating with other Organizations (ONG, Institutions) or to proceeding on their own. The Balouo Salo Organization itself has the right to adopt the project as a future donation one, reserving its right to include winners during working period and to occasionally modify the project, in order to deal with specific requirements such as costs, operational and developing ones.

Furthermore, all proceeds will be devolved to the Balouo Salo Organization, being the contest planned as economical contribution to its humanitarian projects.

JURY

SUPPORTED PROJECT

All registration fees are devolved to the Association Balouo Salo currently engaged in Tanaf valley in an architectural project, to resolve a serious emergency that causes death, disease and poverty to 80,000 people.

The tides of the Atlantic Ocean invade the Casamance River and inundate farmlands destroying rice fields and contaminating the well water. With the project "A Bridge for Life" a bridge-dam will be realized and it will make over 100 km² of arable land and purifying water from wells, resolving the emergency.

The Kaira Loooro logo features the name flanked by three simple traits that have a double interpretation. The three sections on the left of the logo represent both the tides changing trajectory before Kaira Loooro that the purpose of Balouo Salo project to restore health, nutrition and wealth.

The words "Kaira Loooro" belong to the mandingan language, biggest existing ethnic group within the designed area, with a powerful call to faith and a constant religious practice voted to the search for God; words native meaning will be: "Peaceful Architecture".

Kaira Loooro represents not just the mere Architectural process but a bond with culture, its spirituality and search for an inner spirit aimed to be set into reality using architectural meanings and passing through respect and humility.
